

Ted Proferes in front of the old Paradise.

There was Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Spitz, who had the Spitz Furniture and Appliance store, Mr. and Mrs. Andy O'Brien, who had a real estate business across the street from us, and Vicky Gardner, who owned the Sag Harbor Express.

I sold the business in 1990, after it had been in my family for over ninety years.

---

Year: Circa mid-20th century photograph, likely 1940s–1950s based on attire and storefront style.

Tone: Nostalgic and personal, reflecting fond memories of Sag Harbor's small business community.

Mood: Warm, reminiscent, and slightly sentimental, evoking a sense of local history and long-standing family ties.

Style: Documentary and historical narrative, blending personal recollection with visual evidence from a period photograph.